

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a legal or administrative document. The text is dense and covers most of the page, with some lines crossed out or heavily scribbled over. The script is characteristic of the late 15th or early 16th century.

Handwritten signatures and names at the bottom of the page. The names are written in a large, stylized cursive script. One name appears to be "F. P. O. de ..." and another is "F. P. O. de ...". There are also some illegible signatures and initials.